

Peterson's Online Course for the SAT

The SAT* is a standardized exam that many higher education institutions use to help determine student admission, so be prepared when you take your test.

Peterson's offers an Online Course for the SAT (value: $119.95 per student) that is brought to you at no cost by the JROTC.

At www.jrotccollegeprep.com you can access this online course to:

- Take practice exams for the SAT
- Review tutorials
- Focus on improving your test taking strategies

These test preparation resources are free for eligible participants, and technical and academic support are always available.

To broaden your post-high school educational options, contact your school's JROTC instructor to learn more about using the resources at www.jrotccollegeprep.com.

Custom content

With structured preparation, all students can improve their standardized test scores. However, each student has different needs. Using an interactive online platform, Peterson's online courses:

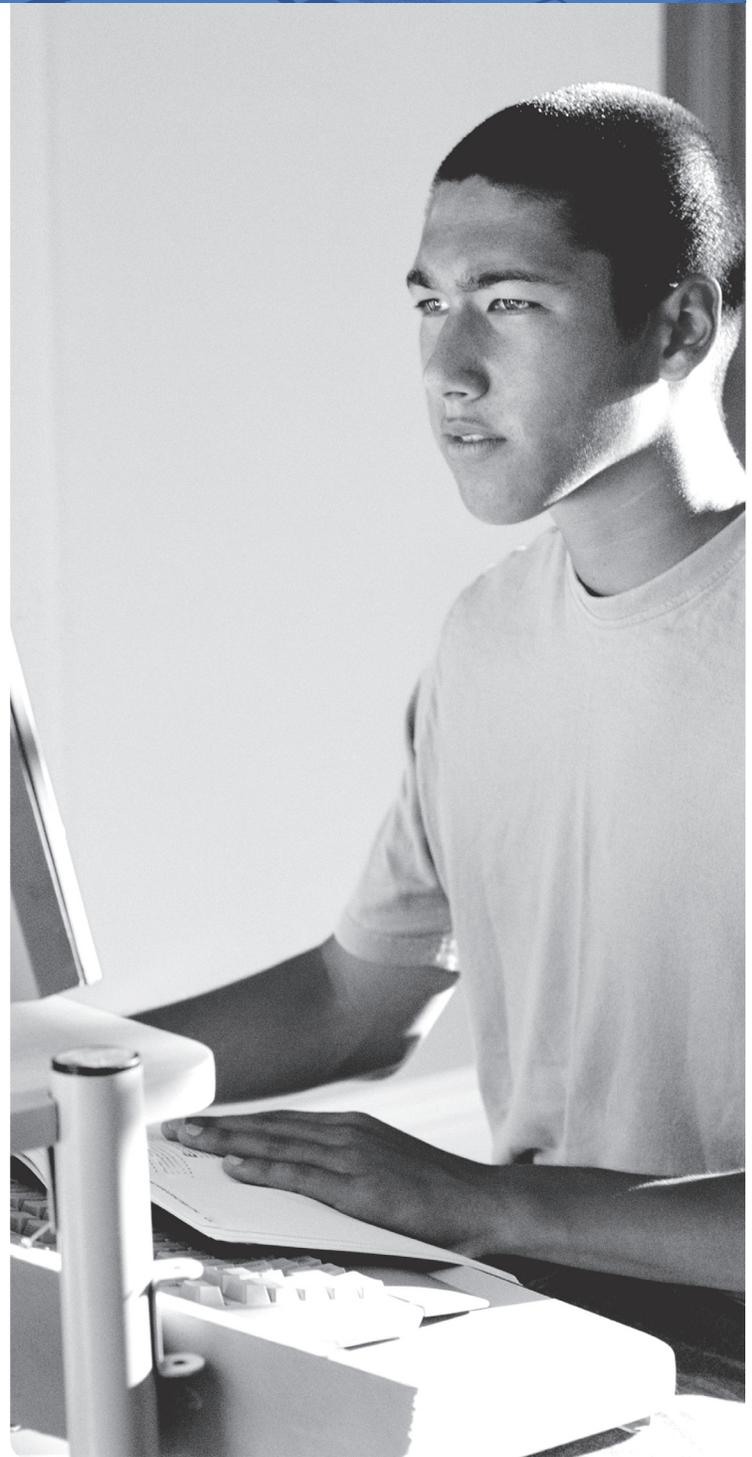

- Deliver customized lesson content tailored to your strengths and weaknesses
- Allow you to progress through lessons at your own pace
- Assign you a Customized Learning Path, a combination of lessons appropriate to your needs as determined by the pre-test exam taken at the beginning of the course

The average Learning Path consists of about 60 lessons, each of which can be completed in about 20 minutes. The approximate amount of time needed to complete all of the lessons in the Customized Learning Path plus the four tests (one pre-test and three full-length practice tests) is 30–40 hours.

Automatic essay scoring

To prepare you for the SAT essay, the full-length practice tests and the diagnostic test in the course include essay prompts similar to those that you will see on the SAT. Your test scores will include computer-generated essay scores along with specific tips for improvement.
